Approach

School counselors and administrators have a lot of students to track, and it can be challenging to provide the level of attention and oversight that each student needs. Faro10 allows this support to be more collaborative by providing input tools that can be used by all involved, and analytic tools that can help monitor and alert when a student is in danger.

These tools provide counselors and mental health professionals with real-time insight into which students may require attention at any given time, and students can request help for themselves or others from an easy to use mobile app.

The insights created are derived from input by Counselors, Family, Classmates, Teachers, and Social Media, providing perspective from numerous points of view and improving visibility and understanding into underlying issues.

All records, alerts and analytics become immediately available to new members of the Care Team, ensuring that important information is not lost during handoff, and that vital information is available to those who need it.
